

Good as GOLD

Solidarity, consistency create letter carrier
clout

There is no argument that workers standing together are more powerful than those who stand alone. That is the basis for unions like the NALC and it is the idea behind the Committee on Letter Carrier Political Education—COLCPE, the fund that gives letter carriers a way to pool their resources and boost their political clout. When members put their “green” together, the result is as good as gold.

This special issue of The Postal Record salutes members and friends who contributed to their political action fund during the calendar year 2005. In the vanguard are members who have set up automatic contributions—regular donations that are a steady source of strength for COLCPE and for the effort to protect letter carrier jobs and benefits. Also listed in later sections are one-time or occasional contributors.

It’s easy to be a regular donor—set up a payroll allotment, an annuity deduction, or an automatic fund transfer from a bank account. The pull-out center insert in this issue gives details on how you can sign up.

NALC President William H. Young, who created this annual tribute issue last year as part of an ongoing effort to build up COLCPE, said even modest contributions each pay period or every month yield big dividends.

“A few dollars a pay period piles up fast when you multiply it by thousands and thousands of hard-working letter carriers,” he noted. “When it goes for our common benefit, even a couple of quarters a day is as good as all the gold a millionaire or a corporate lobbyist has to spread around.”

Great challenges

“We face great challenges,” Young said. “Postal reform is our top priority before the Congress, but we have to keep our eye on a lot of different balls—for instance, health care for members and their families. Retirement security is another. There are many chances for mischief in Washington, as we all can see in the headlines.”

Recent revelations about cash-and-carry members of Congress are repulsive, but a few unscrupulous politicians should not turn off people about “the system.” In fact, President Young said just the opposite should be the case.

“Remember, our political system is what we make it. With COLCPE, letter carriers are simply looking out for our own interests, protecting our jobs and promoting the future of the Postal Service,” he said. “If a majority of honest people turn away, the shady K Street lobbyists and their Capitol Hill cronies will become even more powerful.”

With Congress under pressure to weaken the Postal Service by blocking needed reforms, letter carriers must stand together. “When you’re surrounded, you can’t drop your guard. It’s the time to stay strong,” President Young said. “A dependable flow of donations creates ‘COLCPE clout’ and moves the letter carrier agenda forward.”

Both Republicans and Democrats receive COLCPE’s support. “It is a tool we use to build and sustain the bipartisan support that is the foundation of our legislative program,” Young said.

“We have only one litmus test—do you support the goals of America’s letter carriers?” he said. Heading into the 2006 elections, that’s a critical question.

The honored COLCPE donors for 2005 are organized like this:

First are members who have signed up for automatic contributions. A second set of contributors lists one-time or occasional donors, including NALC Auxiliary members and groups.

The listings are alphabetical by state, then numerically by branch, with members listed alphabetically in their branches. If a member enrolled in automatic contribution also made separate contributions during 2005, that amount has been rolled into the total.

What is COLCPE?

Created in 1975, the non-partisan Committee on Letter Carrier Political Education (COLCPE) fund is used to develop educational programs for letter carriers about critical political topics and to support candidates for federal office. It goes hand-in-hand with grassroots activity by NALC members allowed under the 1993 Hatch Act reforms to reinforce the message of letter carriers in Washington's corridors of power. It is administered by a committee of NALC members and disbursements are reported regularly to the Federal Election Commission and to the NALC membership through the biennial report to the National Convention.

Contributions to COLCPE are not tax-deductible.
