SUPPORTING THOSE WHO-SUPPORT-US

o matter who is in charge in Washington, DC, letter carriers have much at stake in the federal government. We may not think about it as we deliver our routes each day, but we are federal employees whose future depends on decisions made in Congress and signed into law by the president. Lawmakers have a great deal of power regarding the Postal Service, including the ability to impose massive, job-killing cuts in service, abolish our right to collective bargaining or make harmful changes to our health and retirement benefits.

In fact, the Trump administration's task force on Postal Service finances and operations called for such measures in a report released in December. The task force recommended devastating cuts to delivery service and ending the right of postal employees to negotiate pay, benefits and working conditions through a union.

NALC President Fredric Rolando called the report "a huge missed opportunity filled with legislative recommendations that are likely to be dead on arrival in Congress." Rolando called for a realistic approach to reforming the Postal Service and its finances. The extreme proposals in the task force plan probably won't see the light of day, thanks to the year-round engagement of our members to educate lawmakers. But that's only part of the reason we are successful in fending off attacks. The Letter Carrier Political Fund (LCPF) and the letter carriers who generously support it send a strong message that we support those who support us.

As the union's political action committee (PAC), LCPF is authorized to accept voluntary political donations from NALC members. (Of course, by federal law, unions cannot use dues money to contribute to the campaigns of political candidates.) Using these collective funds, we can amplify our message on Capitol Hill, promote our priorities and identify champions to engage on our behalf in Congress.

With the help of the Political Fund, a host of pro-worker candidates on both sides of the aisle won seats in the House of Representatives in the 2018 midterm elections. Some were newcomers, many part of a wave of Democrats who boosted their party to majority status; others were reliable friends, Democrats and Republicans alike, who have worked with NALC in the past.

"Growing the majority of House members who support letter carriers is essential. LCPF allowed us to get to know and support many of the new faces of the 116th Congress," Rolando said. "This early support and education gives me confidence that we can stop terrible ideas like those in the White House postal task force report, and it gives us a solid opportunity to push through Congress a real reform package, one that strengthens the Postal Service and benefits its employees and the public."

The Political Fund supports proletter carrier congressional candidates, regardless of political party, who are likely to support letter carriers as members of the House and the Senate.

"We are a diverse union in so many ways, including our political views," Rolando said. "Our Political Fund gives us the means to speak with one voice on behalf of all letter carriers. We need politicians from both parties to support us, and LCPF helps candidates for office, on a bipartisan basis, who support letter carriers."

This special issue of The Postal Record recognizes those who donated to the Letter Carrier Political Fund in 2018. These carriers gave voluntary donations to help all letter carriers protect their interests in Washington. Some gave one-time donations, while others gave by signing up for convenient deductions from their paychecks every pay period, which spreads out the donation and provides LCPF with a steady, reliable source of funds. A few gave in both ways.

The White House plan vs. NALC's real solutions

Rather than fully addressing the artificial financial crisis caused by the retiree health care pre-funding mandate enacted by Congress in 2006, the White House report launched an all-out attack on the collective-bargaining rights of postal employees. It called for outright revocation of the right to negotiate wages by America's postal unions—a stab to the heart of postal employees.

The report called for massive service cuts by allowing USPS to reduce the frequency and quality of delivery services, which would result in significant job losses for city letter carriers. It also advocated forcing the Postal Service to dramatically raise prices for the delivery of packages—the highly profitable and fastest growing segment of the Postal Service's business. This would likely curtail that growth.

The task force ignored most of the recommendations that a coalition of NALC and the other postal unions provided to the panel last summer. At a White House meeting, Rolando made it clear that the Postal Service, an agency with an 88 percent favorability rating with the American people, does not need a new business model or a fundamental restructuring. Instead. Rolando called on the task force to focus on the real source of the Postal Service's financial crisis—the mandate to pre-fund retiree health care benefits decades in advance, which accounts for 100 percent of the agency's reported losses over the past six years.

The radical ideas that emerged from the White House postal task force report, which was released a few weeks after the midterm elections, highlighted the vital importance of our union's legislative and political activities and of LCPF's role in the midterms. Given the election results, the extremist, anti-worker ideas contained in the task force's final report are not likely to advance in Congress, where hopes for enacting a better reform package have grown.

Surviving and thriving

Over the last two years of one-party control, Republicans dominated the House, the Senate and the White House, which meant that they were able to set the agenda and determine legislative priorities on Capitol Hill. Despite that lopsided power structure, NALC's legislative priorities remained intact-protecting letter carriers and the Postal Service network.

While focusing on those two core legislative priorities, we were able to see more members of Congress from both sides of the aisle recognize the value in working with our union. In other words, NALC not only aims to survive whatever legislative structure comes our way, we also seek ways to thrive.

Surviving and thriving is possible due in large part to the hard work of letter carriers in educating legislators in their districts at every opportunity. The other piece is NALC's ability to use the Letter Carrier Political Fund to build bridges with members on both sides of the aisle.

This combination can and will withstand any political power structure because it relies on education, relationships and supporting those who support us.

Letter carriers may remember a critical House vote that took place last summer on an amendment that would have undermined the Postal Service's ability to provide current financial services and explore expanded ones. The amendment was offered by a member of House Republican leadership and, in the end, was defeated by every Democrat and 27 of our Republican allies, who worked with us and against their own leadership on this vote. These types of battles are fought by building relationships, which LCPF helps us do.

Building an NALC majority in the 116th Congress

As the 115th Congress concluded, there were 236 Republicans and 197 Democrats in the House. The 116th Congress is now underway with 235 Democrats and 199 Republicans (one race has yet to be settled), including 67 new Democrats and 44 new Republicans.

In the Senate last year, there were 51 Republicans and 47 Democrats (along with two independents who caucus with Democrats)—now the balance has shifted a little more in the GOP's favor with 53 Republicans and 47 Democrats/independents, including seven new Republicans and two new Democrats.

There are many new faces on Capitol Hill—120 freshmen, to be exact. NALC monitored every race and met with every candidate who reached out and took the time to answer our candidate questionnaire and to engage with our local leaders in state associations and branches. As a result, LCPF was able to help more than a quarter of these candidates. That means that we need to get to know the remaining 75 percent of these new members right away. Consider the following:

On our anti-privatization resolution from last Congress, 240 House members supported our efforts to keep the Postal Service an independent establishment of the federal government (184 Democrats and 56 Republicans). Of those supporters, 36 no longer are in Congress (including 16 Democrats and 20 Republicans). A deficit of 36 leaves us well below the magic number of 218 that represents a majority of the House.

On our six-day resolution, we ended the last Congress with 259 members (185 Democrats and 74 Republicans). Even if every remaining past supporter signs on, we will have a deficit of 43 members (19 Democrats and 24 Republicans who are not returning), leaving us two members shy of 218.

For our door-delivery resolution, we ended last Congress with 248 supporters (187 Democrats and 61 Republicans), of whom 41 are not returning (including 20 Democrats and 21 Republicans). Losing 41 supporters places us at 207, well below the majority. The deficit is even greater on the service standards resolution, which ended with 232 supporters last Congress, of whom 38 no longer are in Congress.

Analyzing the deficit in support on key resolutions may seem like a numbers game, but it indicates the need to get off on the right foot with the freshmen of the 116th Congress. So, before you meet with your representatives, take the time to do some research about them, including their backgrounds.

How LCPF supports candidates

The Political Fund builds NALC's clout on Capitol Hill in important ways. First, LCPF provides direct support to candidates' campaigns to help them win their elections. LCPF also devotes resources to working with the AFL-CIO to get out the vote for worker-friendly candidates. This support is valuable because it relies on union members engaging fellow union members one-on-one about the issues that bind us all, working to get out the vote early in states that have no-excuse absentee or vote-by-mail elections, or simply turning out union members on Election Day.

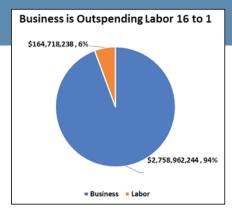

These efforts involve contacting voters by phone and talking to them at their doors. NALC long has been a leader in these grassroots efforts, given our experience going door to door every day.

LCPF also finds innovative ways of supporting campaigns through coordinated efforts, leadership political action committees and super PACs, which allow us to influence elections indirectly. As federal election laws change and as our PAC grows, we continue to find new ways to engage in the process to ensure that the voices of our members are heard loud and clear.

This is especially important as corporations continue to outspend labor. In the 2018 cycle, corporations spent almost $2.8 billion to labor's nearly $165 million. While NALC does well within our industry, private shippers are increasing their spending to promote their agenda.

"To match these efforts, we hope more letter carriers will consider joining LCPF so we can increase our impact on the Hill," President Rolando said.

How to support LCPF

Most donors to LCPF sign up for automatic withdrawal of a small amount of money from their paychecks each pay period through PostalEASE.

"Automatic payroll deduction spreads your donation across the year, while giving the Political Fund a steady source of support," Rolando said. "That steady funding helps the Political Fund by allowing it to plan how to best use the funds in each two-year election cycle."

Career carriers and city carrier assistants (CCAs) may sign up for LCPF donations through payroll deduction. CCAs must sign up following each fiveday break in service, and former CCAs who have converted to career status must sign up again following their conversion to career status.

Active or retired letter carriers also can easily arrange for automatic deductions from a bank account or annuity.

NALC members also have the option of making one-time contributions, or of supplementing their automatic donations, by writing a check to the Letter Carrier Political Fund.

COMPLIANCE 101 Increasing PAC participation without breaking any rules

ALC members help the effort to help elect pro-letter carrier candidates by encouraging contributions to the Letter Carrier Political Fund. By recruiting active and retired NALC members to become PAC contributors, we help ensure that those who are elected to represent us in Washington will be champions for letter carriers and the issues that matter most to us.

Whether you are a seasoned PAC recruiter or are planning your first fundraising event, the tips below address some of the most important rules that govern LCPF. If you have any questions or concerns, NALC's Department of Legislative and Political Affairs can help make sure that you comply with the appropriate regulations—and that we continue to build up this crucial tool.

How do I solicit contributions?

Legally, there are required disclosures. Before engaging with an NALC member—whether at a meeting with other members present or in a one-onone conversation with a non-contributor at an appropriate time and placeall solicitations should begin with the following disclosure printed below. It may be provided in print or read aloud.

You have a right to refuse to contribute without any reprisal. The Letter Carrier Political Fund will use the money it receives to contribute to candidates for federal office and undertake other political spending as permitted by law. Your selection shall remain in full force and effect until canceled. Contributions to the Letter Carrier Political Fund are not deductible for federal income tax purposes.
