November 14, 2016

Dear President-Elect Trump,

On behalf of the nation's active and retired letter carriers represented by the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC), I write to extend congratulations on your election as the 45th President of the United States.

Letter carriers serve in every community throughout the United States, often with long histories of other public service, including fighting for our country. Every day we make sure the Constitutionally-mandated Postal Service continues to remain an innovative, affordable service for the millions of Americans and small businesses who rely on it. Time and again, letter carriers have been recognized as the most trusted federal employees and have helped make the Postal Service the most efficient mailer in the world.

Consequently, the Postal Service is an operationally profitable organization that does not rely on taxpayer money. Today, the Postal Service thrives with an overwhelming boom in e-commerce to the extent that packages are beginning to be delivered seven days a week.

Since our founding in 1889, we have remained steadfast in our mission to ensure that this nation has a strong and vibrant Postal Service that provides good jobs to every community across the nation. NALC stands ready to work with you and your administration to create policies that strengthen our country and America's most beloved institution.

Sincerely,
