

2010 NALC Food Drive

What a year!

FACED WITH A NATION STILL TRYING TO COME BACK from a recession, high unemployment and a less-than-robust stock market, letter carriers set out this year to at least match last year's national food drive's record total to help "Stamp Out Hunger" in their communities—although some feared that goal was unreachable.

But with determination, hard work and help from a lot of friends, the NALC National Food Drive not only set a new record of 77.1 million pounds this year, but boosted the overall total for the drive's 18-year history to more than 1 billion pounds.

It is a truly amazing accomplishment made possible by thousands of city and rural letter carriers, other postal employees who pitched in to help, supportive postal management in Washington and in many areas of the nation, the labor movement, and the numerous corporate and charitable organizations that helped ensure the drive's success.

The final tally for this year's drive by 1,444 NALC branches was 77,132,180 pounds of food, collected along postal routes in more than 10,000 cities and towns in all 50 states and U.S. jurisdictions and delivered to local food banks, pantries and shelters to help needy families.

The result of the May 8 effort easily eclipsed last year's previous record haul of 73.4 million pounds. And it increased the total donations collected since the nationwide drive began in 1993 to 1,059,800,000 pounds.

President Fred Rolando said that, despite the lingering effects of the recession, postal customers came through again this year in the continuing fight against hunger in America.

"I am especially proud of our members and the thousands of rural letter carriers and other volunteers who delivered the generous donations from millions of caring citizens, people who wanted to help needy families in their communities," Rolando said.

Tampa, Florida Branch 599 collected 2,062,529 pounds to emerge as the top union local in the country—edging out neighboring West Coast Florida Branch 1477, which had led the nation the past two years.

Buffalo-Western New York Branch 3, which dominated the drive for several years, was third, followed by Garden Grove, California Branch 1100. (A list of the top 10 branches in each of the 10 categories can be found on pages 16-17.)

California branches jumped by nearly 1.1 million pounds over the 2009 haul, to more than 6.3 million pounds—an increase of 22 percent attributed to the infusion of blue plastic bags throughout southern California sponsored by various food banks, the Ralph's grocery chain, and local Channels 2 and 9, all carrying the G-10 postage indicia compliments of USPS.

The California result mirrored what has been happening in Florida, where plastic bags have been used for a few years through the generosity of Publix stores and USPS. Florida branch collections went up by 1.2 million pounds over last year to more than 11.7 million pounds this year, a total that helps to show off the Sunshine State's well-heeled campaign.

Rolando expressed the union's appreciation to its national food drive partners, including the U.S. Postal Service, the Campbell Soup Company, the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, Valpak Direct Marketing Systems, United Way Worldwide and its local United Ways, the AFL-CIO, and the Feeding America food bank network.

Rolando also thanked "Family Circus" cartoonists Bil and Jeff Keane, who yearly provide special artwork, as well as Uncle Bob's Self Storage, which donated trucks used for transportation of donated food, and Accenture, which assisted NALC in compiling early returns from branches.

Increasing visibility

The drive was helped immeasurably by extensive public service advertising from both Campbell Soup and Feeding America, which reached millions of Americans via the Internet, newspapers, radio and television, and in national magazines such as Sports Illustrated, People, Cooking Light and Parade.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Thomas J. Vilsack, who oversees the government's food and nutrition programs, provided some hands-on support and publicity for the drive on May 8 in Pennsylvania at an appearance at the Pittsburgh Food Bank.

"Congratulations on another successful food drive and thank you and all your members for your compassion and commitment to helping those in need," Vilsack wrote President Rolando after the drive.

Celebrities have always been a major link between our food drive and the general public, and this year, with the sour economy, their endorsements were even more important.

Actors David Arquette and his wife, Courteney Cox, again provided a huge boost, appearing in television, radio

“Valpak and Cox Target Media are pleased to have once again been a part of the Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive, and are delighted in this year's record number of collections. It gives us great pride to know that Valpak franchises, employees and advertisers have helped to raise awareness by using our envelope to provide national exposure for this cause.”

and magazine ads and at public gatherings. “American Idol” host Ryan Seacrest again recorded a nationwide radio public service announcement touting the drive, and American Hot Rod Association drag racing star Ashley Force Hood not only made a television appearance with St. Louis, Missouri Branch 343 coordinator Barry Linan on the ESPN2 network, but also, for the second consecutive year, encouraged her social media fans on the Facebook and Twitter websites to participate in the drive.

St. Louis, with Force Hood’s help, collected 741,700 pounds to help needy families there.

“It’s been a tough year for a lot of working families in the St. Louis region,” Linan said. “It’s extra work for letter carriers picking up the food, but it’s a labor of love for us to help out those who are less fortunate in their time of need.”

On the day before the drive, viewers of ABC-TV’s “Good Morning America” program were treated to an extensive live promotion of the food drive by weatherman Sam Champion in New York City, which featured a full-screen shot of the Stamp Out Hunger logo.

A competitive advantage

Many athletes and politicians were critical in asking the general public to place a bag of food by their mailbox on May 8.

In Southern California, Dustin Brown, the captain of the Los Angeles Kings professional hockey team, appeared at a kickoff event.

Dallas, Texas Branch 132 recruited several former Dallas Cowboys football players—including Chad Henning, Preston Pearson and Corey Proctor—who were on hand for the start of the drive in nearby Fort Worth. They all mingled with the news media along with Fort Worth letter carriers and children from the North Texas Food Bank.

In Oklahoma, members of the Tulsa Shock women’s professional basketball team helped sort and re-box more than 80,000 pounds of food from the letter carriers’ drive at the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma, which coincided with its “WNBA Cares Week” events.

The food drive also took on a definite bipartisan bent, with Democratic Sen. Al Franken of Minnesota on hand with Minneapolis Branch 9 President Pam Donato and at other Minnesota towns on food drive day.

In Florida, Republican Gov. Charlie Crist gave the drive a huge boost by appearing at a kickoff ceremony in Tampa that provided the drive some great publicity throughout his state.

Numerous other political and government leaders gave a helping hand as well, including Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson (D-TX), who placed a statement in the Congressional Record urging the public's support.

Old friend, new partner

Greater rural letter carrier involvement in the food drive was a major success factor throughout the nation with the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association coming onboard as an official national partner for the first time. This

“The rural carriers really came through, making a total effort,” said Fargo-West Fargo Branch 205 letter carrier Jeff Borgrud to the West Fargo Pioneer.

Joe Henschen, executive vice president of Branch 1477 in West Coast Florida, praised the role of postal management in the Suncoast District and St. Petersburg, not to mention the “great participation” from rural carriers. Henschen’s feelings were echoed by numerous NALC officials across Florida, who held up their postal districts as examples of how city and rural letter carriers, working together with management, have made an unparalleled impact on fighting hunger there.

In Ellijay, Georgia, rural carriers took the lead in coordinating the drive for NALC Branch 5177 and collected 7,900 pounds for the Community Food Pantry in Gilmer County, boosted by some help from Boy Scout Troop 402 in unloading and sorting the collections.

“For 18 years, the Postal Service has stood proudly with the National Association of Letter Carriers to help ‘Stamp Out Hunger’ in America. This year’s record achievement in food donations collected by our carriers demonstrates the generosity of our customers and the determination of our employees to come to the aid of fellow Americans in need. Our carriers have demonstrated once again that service to the community doesn’t end at the mailbox. The Postal Service’s commitment to this worthy cause has never been greater.”

success was quite evident in the record collection of 85,000 pounds in Bend, Oregon—25,000 pounds more than in 2009.

Ditto for Fargo, North Dakota, and surrounding areas, where rural carriers made a tremendous difference.

Uncooperative forces

Weather was a negative factor for the food drive in many areas, especially in Nashville, Tennessee, and in Hillsboro, Ohio.

The weather wasn't nearly as bad in Naperville, Illinois, but a steady rain coupled with the effects of the economy did dampen the collection for the Loaves & Fishes food pantry, although the food that was collected was still greatly appreciated.

"Please tell the carriers we love them," wrote Charles McLimans, the pantry's executive director, to Naperville Branch 1151 President Debbie Blake-Moench.

Thank-yous abound

Thousands of miles to the southeast in St. Augustine, Florida, the feelings of gratitude were overflowing.

"A huge hug and thank-you to all of you who worked this past Saturday to make the food drive such a huge success," wrote Kami Roeder, director of the Christian Service Center, to St. Augustine Branch 689 food drive coordinator

“ The rural carriers of the NRLCA are honored to work with the NALC toward the noble cause of ending hunger in America. We were proud to pick up such generous donations from our customers and deliver them to families in need. The resounding impact of this year's drive will be felt in our communities for many months to come. We look forward to continuing our involvement as a national partner of this event. ”

All across the nation, this special day of extra work was praised by citizens, the media, and especially those who help care for the needy.

“Take time to thank your letter carrier for helping to Stamp Out Hunger,” said Louis Gunning of the Stewpot food pantry in a letter in the Natchez (Mississippi) Democrat.

In Dayton, Nevada, 11 carriers collected 2,500 pounds throughout the Dayton Valley, and Postmaster Mike Benson told the Reno Gazette that “every one of the carriers was happy to be a part of the drive.”

“I want to thank the letter carriers and everyone who made a donation to help fight hunger in Oklahoma,” said Rodney Bivens, executive director of the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma in the Chickasha Express-Star.

In Rutland County, Vermont, a new record was set at 30,225 pounds, filling the food shelves throughout the county. One of the keys to success in Rutland was the dedication of Branch 495 letter carriers and other volunteers who stood out on the city’s main roadway during rush hour next to three large inflatable versions of Campbell Soup cans, plus banners and other food drive artwork.

“A tremendous amount of gratitude goes to our Letter Carriers Union Branch 495 for the outstanding effort and support to collect the food donated by our community,” said United Way of Rutland County executive director Chuck Sharp in the Rutland Herald.

Making a difference

In South Carolina, the 65,338 pounds collected for Harvest Hope Food Bank was more than 4,400 pounds higher than last year.

“Each year, the Stamp Out Hunger food drive goes far toward helping us meet our growing and incredible donation needs,” said food bank CEO Denise Holland to

CarolinaLive.com. “We’re so fortunate to partner with the National Association of Letter Carriers and we appreciate their hard work and compassion in picking up food as they make their rounds.”

“I hope the carriers know that the food that was collected will help to maintain badly needed services for those in need in our community,” wrote Adrian Weatherwax, executive director of Helping Hand of Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, to its local Branch 4645 food drive coordinator Steve Koerner.

Carriers at the Windsor Post Office in Colorado collected 3,030 pounds of food, and food pantry director Brenda Heckman was grateful.

“It has restored our shelves. We were running low on things, but we’re back in business now,” she told the Windsor Beacon. “We appreciate all of the carriers’ hard work.”

The sentiment was echoed in the heart of Appalachia.

The award was presented to the union “in recognition of the enormous public service the NALC has rendered this nation through its annual drives to collect food for the nation’s hungry.” The award was presented June 8 by PostCom Chairman Joseph Schick (l). Also pictured is NALC Director of Public Relations Drew Von Bergen, the food drive’s national coordinator.

“Feeding America salutes the National Association of Letter Carriers on completing its 18th and most successful food drive to date. I am proud of our ongoing collaboration with the United States Postal Service, the NALC, the National Rural Letter Carriers’ Association, Campbell’s, and the Feeding America network of food banks, and I look forward to many more years of success feeding families together.”

“It is only through the kindness, generosity and hard work of people like our friends at the post office here...that we are able to do the work we do,” wrote Rev. Tony Palubicki of the Food Bank of Wise County,

“ Campbell is committed to eliminating hunger in the communities where we operate. We salute the effort of the National Association of Letter Carriers, Feeding America and all of the corporate and non-profit partners who helped achieve record-breaking results in this year’s Stamp Out Hunger food drive. No other cause-related program is a better example of how public and private partners can work together to achieve extraordinary results. ”

Virginia, to Big Stone Gap Branch 3508 coordinator James Holcomb.

The Orange County (California) Register quoted Laguna Niguel carrier Tom Berney on why the drive is important.

“I know if I didn’t have this good job I have, I’d probably be one of the needy ones,” the member of Garden Grove Branch 1100 said. “This is a crisis in our communities right now. I was just very touched and grateful [when picking up donations].”

Achieving new heights

Food drive collection records fell at many other points across the nation, including in its far northern reaches. For example, Juneau, Alaska Branch 4985 carriers collected 7,973 pounds, up almost 2,000 pounds from 2009.

“A lot of the walking routes downtown had to make extra trips back to the mail truck just to unload the food they collected,” said Branch 4985’s Mark Piotrowski in the Capital City Weekly. “It was great that we could do more for our community than just deliver the mail.”

Jacksonville, Florida, experienced its third straight year of increases in donations, bringing in more than 351,000 pounds for needy families on the First Coast.

“As letter carriers deliver in the neighborhoods throughout the area, they see how the economy has adversely affected some of the customers they deliver to,” Northeast Florida Branch 53 President Bob Henning said. “They also see how generous people can be when times are tough.”

The food drive is a teaching tool, too.

At Owensboro Catholic Middle School in Kentucky, Julie Renshaw’s eighth grade class used the drive as a community service project, helping to load containers of donations onto trucks.

“These kids don’t know about homelessness because they aren’t homeless,” Renshaw told the Owensboro Messenger-Inquirer, “and once they do this, it becomes closer to their hearts. There’s a lot of need out there.”

And Barb La Plante of the Pine Island Food Pantry in Florida told her local Eagle newspaper that she had an eye-opening experience on Food Drive Day.

“I had the pleasure of riding along with one of the carriers and now I know what they go through every day that they make their deliveries,” she said. “It makes you appreciate what they have to do six days a week.” ✉

Eyes and ears

This year's food drive was another example of the letter carrier's daily compassion throughout the streets and neighborhoods of America, and it was clearly appreciated by Carol Bolding, executive director of the Committee on Church Cooperation in Decatur, Alabama, which received 13,400 pounds of food from NALC Branch 1314.

"Our postal carriers are the eyes and ears of the community," she said in a letter to drive coordinator Calvin Powers.

"You all know what's going on in the homes and the neighborhoods (where) you deliver the mail," she added. "I'm sure that many times you are called upon to be social workers along with your regular responsibilities. Thank everyone for going the extra mile and participating in this much needed food drive." ✉

In Memoriam

Only a month after the NALC drive reached its historic 1 billion pound collection total this year, the labor movement lost one of its stalwarts in community services. Chris Marston, 61, of Bay Minette, Alabama, was a longtime leader of the AFL-CIO Community Services Department in Washington and one of the principal individuals when the NALC, AFL-CIO and U.S. Postal Service began formulating the national food drive in 1991 with a pilot drive in 10 cities. He had retired earlier this year.
