Branch officers often call NALC Headquarters with questions about financial issues. Many questions also surface during officer training. After the question is answered, the branch officer may be directed to the NALC Branch Officer’s Guide to Finance and Administration, available for purchase from the NALC Supply Department or for free on the NALC website from the Secretary-Treasurer’s page. The guide contains the following sections: Branch Officer Duties, NALC Dues, Reporting to the U.S. Department Of Labor, Reporting to the Internal Revenue Service, Bonding Requirements, and Branch Record Keeping. If your branch secretary/treasurer does not have this guide, I suggest that the branch get one for use by all fiduciary officers in the branch.

The following is a sample of common IRS-related questions asked during phone calls or during training seminars, as well as the answers and their location in the NALC Branch Officer’s Guide to Finance and Administration.

If we pay our stewards $150 per month as a stipend, do we have to file a W-2?

Yes. Stewards are considered to be employees of the branch (whether they are appointed by the branch president or elected by the branch membership) and, as such, the branch must report stipends as wages and withhold the appropriate taxes. This holds true for all officers of a branch receiving any payments that could be considered wages (see pages 4-4 and 4-5 of the guide).

I heard that if you stay under $600 per year paid to a branch officer, you don’t have to do anything—not even issue a 1099. Is this true?

No. Again, officers are considered employees of the branch and, as such, the branch must deduct payroll taxes and pay taxes, since the branch is an employer. It does not matter how much money an employee earns; the branch must pay all payroll taxes and issue a W-2 (see page 4-7 of the guide). A Form 1099-MISC is issued under two circumstances: 1) The branch makes a payment under a non-accountable plan to a member who is not considered an employee under IRS tax rules (see pages 4-15 and 4-16 of the guide); or 2) The branch makes a payment to somebody who is not a member for services rendered to the branch, such as a contractor.

The 1099-MISC must be issued only for services rendered and not when payments are made to purchase goods. The 1099-MISC must be issued only when total payments to the individual are $600 or more during the tax year (see page 4-18 of the guide). However, this does not exempt the individual from claiming the extra income.

My branch/state association has been receiving notices from our state that we must purchase workers’ compensation insurance. Is this true?

In all 50 states, if you pay any wages then you are considered an employer and workers’ compensation insurance is mandatory (see page 4-7 of the guide). In some states, the insurance must be secured directly with a state fund. In most states, the premium and benefit structures are set by each state government but the actual insurance coverage is provided by standard insurance companies via your insurance agent. Volunteers and/or employees who receive very little compensation may be exempt from such coverage in some states. Check your state’s website for further clarification.

Is any documentation required for per diem payments?

Yes. The branch needs to maintain proof of an overnight stay. A hotel receipt, a copy of a round-trip plane ticket or similar documentation should be sufficient. The branch need not collect documentation (receipts) of the amount of expenses actually incurred (see pages 4-13 through 4-17 of the guide for more information on per diem).

Is an early payment to a hotel or airline considered a travel advance?

No. Making an early payment directly to a hotel or airline—or reimbursing a member for the actual cost of an airline ticket purchased in advance for approved branch travel—is not considered a travel advance.

Is it OK to give branch officers travel advances?

Travel advances are OK as long as the branch keeps certain rules in mind. To comply with the rules outlined by the Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (LMRDA), the sum of all advances to any one individual in a fiscal year should never exceed $2,000. Also, the officer receiving the advance should document expenditures against the advance and return to the branch any excess funds for which documentation was not submitted.

In addition, IRS rules require an advance for expenses to be made within a reasonable time—generally no more than 30 days before the expenses are expected to be incurred. Under the LMRDA, an advance for expenses is considered a reportable loan unless the advance is provided within 30 days of travel and accounted for within 30 days following the trip (see page 4-21 of the guide). To avoid encountering problems when advances are not properly accounted for, it may be best to forgo advances and instead reimburse for actual expenses after receipts have been submitted or opt to provide per diem per the IRS guidelines.
