

Practice makes perfect for MDA[®]

Sometimes it's a new idea that takes off. Sometimes it's an old standby that works. Either way, letter carriers never stop finding ways to support the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA). We've been MDA's oldest and most stalwart partner for seven decades because branches keep finding the best way to bring in donors.

"Branches keep trying and refining new fundraising ideas, while keeping the proven ones in play and learning from experience what works and what doesn't," NALC President Brian L. Renfroe said. "Letter carriers combine dedication and creativity to keep boosting our overall support for MDA."

NALC's efforts to support MDA help children and adults with neuromuscular diseases, as well as their families, who depend on MDA for medical research and support. NALC began raising funds for MDA when it was founded in 1950, and two years later, the union adopted MDA as its official charity and became MDA's first national sponsor. Branches nationwide committed to raising money on the local level.

Since then, NALC branches and state associations have dreamed up creative ideas for fundraising events that increased our fundraising totals to more than $1 million in many years, and expanded on the ones that work best. Many rely on events like bowlathons, golf and poker tournaments, fill-the-satchel drives and dozens more. Letter carriers also support MDA by volunteering at MDA Summer Camps and other events.

Branches were forced to expand their reach using internet tools created when the COVID-19 pandemic forced the suspension of traditional fundraising events starting in 2020. Those tools were so successful that many NALC branches kept them in place to supplement in-person fundraising.

MDA works in close collaboration with NALC to offer similar online tools so that letter carriers can focus on the fundraising, such as event websites that track donations. Branches add the details of their events and enter the RSVPs, payments and other data, which automatically go to MDA.

MDA can help with fundraising details as well, from tax information to assisting with donation letters to offering an MDA-branded template for publicity materials. The popular shamrock, summer camp and holiday pinups that donors can buy and display their names on a wall also are available. The charity can often arrange for a nearby MDA ambassador with muscular dystrophy to attend an event to represent the people whose lives MDA affects.

“We have the tools you need to succeed at the branch level,” Assistant to the President for Community Services Christina Vela Davidson said. “All it takes is planning the event and getting people to participate. This is how we’ve succeeded in building our support for MDA for so long.”

Every year, NALC recognizes the top fundraising branches. On page 25, you’ll find the MDA Honor Roll, listing branches that collected the most donations for MDA in 2025, along with the list of what each contributing branch and other offices brought in.

As in several past years, the top fundraising branch this year was New Jersey Merged Branch 38.

“Branch 38’s success with Muscular Dystrophy Association fundraising comes from our commitment to running a wide variety of events that engage different members and supporters throughout the year,” Branch 38 President Joe Rutkoski said. It’s also “due to our teamwork, led by Branch 38 MDA coordinator Armando Pedreira. He really does an outstanding job. Each MDA event has a different chairperson who is responsible for and runs an event. Each one of these chairpersons, along with all the officers and staff, are dedicated to the cause of MDA.”

Finding new ways to raise funds is a big part of the branch’s success, Rutkoski added.

“The real key to our success is our willingness to innovate. We’re always open to trying new ideas and seeing what works and what does not work. In 2025, we introduced a deep-sea fishing trip and a bourbon-and-cigar day—both were strong successes, and we’re bringing them back again this year. In 2026, we are looking into a karaoke night for MDA. You have to keep trying new things. That’s the formula: Keep experimenting, keep what works, and don’t hesitate to drop what doesn’t.”

“I’m so proud of what all our branches have accomplished, and I thank them for their hard work,” Vela Davidson said. “We’re here to help them with whatever they need to support their events in the future. Thanks to their efforts, NALC raised a total of $945,757.16 for MDA last year.”

Each year, The Postal Record takes a look at some of the ways branches are raising money for MDA and what they are learning from it.

Going with what works on the right day

Kenneth Best, vice president and MDA coordinator for Kansas City, MO Branch 30, has figured out how to put on an MDA event that gets results. For more than two decades, the branch has relied on a tried-and-true golf tournament with a dinner afterward that usually attracts about 60 golfers. The latest tournament yielded about $3,000 for MDA.

The branch also holds a bowlathon the Sunday before Columbus Day each year that brings out roughly 80 bowlers. The timing is key, Best said—letter carriers work long, hard hours, even on Saturdays, so an event with a break the next day gives them room to come out.

“It works out better when you have it on a Sunday before a holiday,” he said. “People show up. It’s just hard to get the new generation of people out there. And we try to do stuff on Saturday nights in the hall, and people just wouldn't come."

A recent trivia night event flopped because of the scheduling. "It was on Saturday night," Best said. "It just didn't work out. It's just too much competition from everything else people can do."

The branch schedules the golf tournament for nice weather, of course, but avoids competing with outdoor opportunities for the bowlathon.

Best has boosted participation, especially among younger carriers, by giving incentives to organizers like stewards to get the word out.

"The station that gets the most teams, I throw them a pizza party. I pay for it out of my own pocket," he said. "The last year was a big increase because we got several stations ... that in the past we didn't have a lot of participation [from]."

At the bowlathon, he said, they nearly filled all the lanes at Premier Bowl.

"I was more out there networking with the younger people, trying to get them involved to keep it going and get them to talk to their people," he said. One carrier wrangled seven teams in a station that usually sends one.

"It doesn't just have to be postal workers," he added, "It's going to be family and friends like that who come out and participate, which makes it better."

Building back with new ideas

Retirements and the pandemic hurt Fargo-West Fargo, ND Branch

205's MDA fundraising efforts, but the branch is clawing its way back with innovative events, said Branch President Cory Carter.

The branch once relied on an annual auction of items donated by local businesses, he said: "We would raise around $13,000 in some years. But the COVID pandemic really slammed the door on that. We weren't getting out to the businesses." When the carrier who spent months going from business to business each year, Randy Sorby, retired as well, the auction faded.

"He retired in the midst of that and we were trying to find somebody to take it over," Carter said. "But, you know, the Post Office and being a letter carrier is so different now, compared to what it was pre-COVID. I mean, the forced overtime and short staff just really prevents us from being able to do what Randy had done. He never worked overtime, so he would have his days off to be able to go around. He had all these relationships built up, and so many businesses closed or were just really pulling back on anything that they donated."

The branch has turned to new ideas to support MDA.

A Fargo restaurant, the 701 Eatery, was offering a new way to fundraise, and the branch jumped at the chance.

"They had a thing called Dine to Donate, and it was a new thing they were trying at their restaurant," Carter said. "So, all they really required was, you know, four to five people to volunteer their time for—I think they were there for three or four hours, something like that. And what they would do then is cut us a check for 10 percent of everything that they brought in for the evening."

Instead of four or five volunteers, eight letter carriers showed up, raising a quick $341 for MDA. They also took advantage of the opportunity for publicity. While he was bussing tables and bringing drinks to customers, branch member Dave Steichen made sure customers knew they were letter carriers working for a good cause.

“He was so good with the customers. He would go around to all the tables and tell them what we were doing, why we were there, who we were. He was phenomenal with that,” Carter said. “He was like the social butterfly for us.”

Carter backed up the event with an appearance on a local radio station to get customers out, giving both the restaurant and MDA an extra boost.

The branch tried another ready-to-use fundraising opportunity by selling raffle tickets for all-inclusive travel packages offered by a fundraising company. The winner chose the package they wanted. The packages included package trips like three nights in Kentucky for a bourbon-tasting tour and a six-day trip to Italy with a private chef and winery tour.

The results were disappointing, though.

“I thought this was going to be beating people away to buy tickets, but it didn’t turn out as well as I thought,” Carter said. “We sold enough tickets to cover the cost of the trip,” but they had trouble selling more.

“We ended up selling 28 tickets and, you know, tough economy right now, I guess,” he said. “But had we sold all 100 tickets, and I think some larger branches would easily be able to do this, we would have $8,100 to send to MDA.”

Taking advantage of an event that already attracts folks—the branch’s annual Christmas dinner—has yielded results, though.

“The last couple years, we’ve played bingo and people love it. We do like $5 a card and play like three games,” yielding an easy $400 for MDA last year, he said.

“That’s a fun one to do, and it doesn’t take a whole lot of preparation,” Carter said. “And who doesn’t love bingo?”

Keeping it fun

For many years, Western Massachusetts Branch 46 has relied on its annual golf tournament to bring in a healthy haul for MDA. The branch charges $500 for a foursome and $125 for single golfers, which includes a catered dinner afterward. Last year’s event, held at the Southampton Country Club, brought in about $8,000 for MDA, said Branch President Michael Harazmus.

“It’s a fun event, so that it makes it easier,” he added. “We do have hole sponsors. We ask businesses or individuals to sponsor tees [at $150 per hole]. That’s a way of raising money. Then there’s a dinner that follows and a raffle. And, you know, we either purchase or get donated prizes. And then that’s another way of generating revenue for MDA.”

Planning the event requires some work, he said, but running it is easy: “There’s heavy lifting behind the scenes, but the day of the event, it just kind of flows freely.”

Harazmus estimates that about half the players are letter carriers, with the rest made up of family, friends and members of the community.

As with many fun-oriented golf events, the Branch 46 tournament uses a scramble format where each player in a foursome plays from the best shot among them. “Doesn’t matter how good you are, you’re playing the best shot out of the four shots that you take,” he said.

The tournament usually brings in at least 80 players, but the branch’s goal this year is 28 foursomes, which would require 112 golfers. Most are reliable participants each year. Harazmus credits the lively atmosphere for the consistent success of the tournament.

“The fact that it’s fun,” he said, “keeps them coming back.”

MDA’s mission

Since it was founded, MDA has used the funds raised by letter carriers to support medical research on dozens of neuromuscular diseases to develop medications and treatments that ease symptoms, some of which might extend life spans. For instance, most children with Duchenne muscular dystrophy, the most common and severe type of the disease, once died in their teens. Today, there are adults in their 40s living with Duchenne.

MDA is the nation’s largest nonprofit supporter of research on neuromuscular diseases, funding hundreds of physicians and scientists in the struggle to free children, and the families who love them, from the harm caused by muscular dystrophy and by more than 40 related muscle-debilitating diseases, including amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (better known as ALS). MDA’s efforts have contributed to numerous major advances in muscle biology and therapy development.

MDA has been involved in research into basic muscle and nerve biology since its inception, when little was known about how muscles were formed or how they functioned. Since then, thousands of published scientific papers have explained how the tissues work and what goes wrong in neuromuscular diseases, building a knowledge base for finding treatments. MDA funding supported the research that led to the identification of the genetic causes of dozens of diseases, starting with the discovery of the dystrophin gene in 1986. This research is paying dividends as new medications and therapies are being developed.

The charity also supports children and adults with neuromuscular diseases, and their families, by improving their quality of life. One way it provides this support is by sponsoring summer camps for children. At these adaptive camps, children participate in traditional summer camp events, including swimming, arts and crafts, sports and games. Letter carriers not only help fund these camps—some carriers volunteer their time to work directly with the children.

MDA Honor Roll

To recognize the efforts of NALC branches in supporting MDA’s mission each year, The Postal Record publishes the MDA fundraising results of every participating branch from the previous year, as reported to us by MDA. The branches listed on the following pages have helped to fulfill the shared vision of support for NALC’s official charity.

If your branch didn’t participate in the fundraising drive for MDA last year, perhaps it is time to contact your branch leadership and volunteer as an MDA coordinator or event volunteer. If your branch raised funds last year but you do not see your branch’s donations listed or the amount is inaccurate, please contact NALC Assistant to the President for Community Services Vela Davidson at mda@nalc.org or 202-662-2489 as soon as possible.

“Our goal is always to top the previous year in support for MDA,” President Renfroe said. “Any letter carrier can organize events, volunteer or participate, and the more good ideas and dedication we bring to the table, the better we do. We are proud of what our union has accomplished to make the lives of people affected by neuromuscular diseases better. I can’t wait to see what letter carriers accomplish together for MDA again this year!” PR
