In his keynote speech on Monday, July 21, to the more than 5,300 delegates on hand for the National Association of Letter Carriers’ 69th Biennial Convention in Philadelphia, President Fredric V. Rolando highlighted the many victories letter carriers have celebrated since the 2012 convention in Minneapolis, while also laying out the challenges the union faces in the coming months and years.

With a balance of wit and gravitas—topped off by some good old-fashioned labor union passion—Rolando noted what a remarkable achievement it is within the labor movement that our union is celebrating its 125th anniversary this year. He used that milestone as a springboard to review the NALC’s past successes as they relate to the challenges that lie ahead—for the union and for the U.S. Postal Service.

“The task before us is a daunting one,” he said, “because it involves a wide variety of fronts—political, legislative, managerial, commercial, not to mention the media and the public. But the National Association of Letter Carriers is up to the task. Our union is strong and unified, we know what’s at stake, and we have the facts on our side.”

‘LET’S GET TO WORK’

At 10 o’clock sharp, NALC Secretary-Treasurer Jane Broendel called the convention to order and invited South Florida Branch 1071 letter carrier Stephanie Bostic to sing “The Star-Spangled Banner.” Following Bostic were Philadelphia Branch 157’s Leo Zachwieja for the Pledge of Allegiance and, for the invocation, the Rev. Al Rossi from Philadelphia’s Church of the Living Hope.

Next, Broendel called for a moment of silence to remember and honor the NALC members who have died since the 2012 convention in Minneapolis.

Philadelphia Branch 157 President Randy Zebin was then invited to the stage to welcome delegates to his city. Zebin had the honor of introducing Philadelphia Postmaster Howard Sample and Philadelphia Council AFL-CIO President Patrick Eiding.

In his brief remarks, Eiding noted that the local Teamsters and Carpenters unions have a dispute with the facility that runs the Pennsylvania Convention Center, which was why some members from both of those unions were distributing leaflets to NALC convention-goers outside the center throughout the day. Although those unions are not calling the information effort a picket line, their dispute was enough to prevent Rep. Bob Brady—a card-carrying member of the Carpenters union—from attending the convention. (NALC President Rolando later read a letter of regret from Brady.)

Returning to the podium, Broendel asked the retired national officers on stage to stand and be recognized. She then handed the mic over to NALC Region 12 National Business Agent Bill Lucini, who in turn introduced the other 14 national business agents and called on the regional administrative assistants to stand up and take a bow.

Broendel returned to the microphone and introduced the NALC’s resident national officers.

As Rolando took the stage to the sounds of Ike and Tina Turner’s version of “Philadelphia Freedom,” the letter carrier
tant strategic goals," he said. “We won pay increases, kept our COLA clause, maintained the ban on subcontracting, won an all full-time career workforce and developed a pathway to career jobs for non-career bargaining unit letter carriers. We avoided a permanent two-tier workforce and helped position the Postal Service to become a major player in package delivery again.”

Our satisfaction at these successes, Rolando said, was tempered by the January 2013 death of what he called “our union’s animating spirit over the past 40 years,” former NALC President Vincent R. Sombrero.

“To call Vince a giant in NALC history would be an understatement,” President Rolando said. “He was a leader like no other. Nobody knew better than Vince that NALC conventions are about the future,” Rolando added. “So while we celebrate our distinguished history this week and review the events of the past two years, we should also draw inspiration for the battles ahead.”

Philadelphia marks the third consecutive convention that finds the NALC battling USPS over Saturday delivery, Rolando said. “For L’Enfant Plaza, Saturday delivery is a cost, plain and simple,” he said. “For us, Saturday delivery is the Postal Service’s competitive advantage.”

But our problems aren’t limited to L’Enfant Plaza, the president said. “The past two years, we’ve defeated several legislative efforts that would have harmed the Postal Service, us, and the millions of businesses and people who depend on a robust Postal Service,” Rolando said. “We beat back these proposals, thanks to excellent work from our legislative and political staff and you, our grassroots activists.”

There is a silver lining in the legislative process, the president said. “The Obama administration has agreed to discuss alternative proposals for postal reform in next year’s budget,” Rolando said. “Plus, the recent financial turnaround at USPS and personnel changes at the Office of Management and Budget give us hope that we can turn the administration in our favor.”

The NALC has made other progress, too. “We have built unity among the four postal unions,” Rolando said. “And with them we have reached consensus among key business groups, mailers and trade associations on a sensible industry coalition plan.”

This plan, developed with the other postal unions as part of our recently formed alliance, became the core of a consensus plan the NALC hopes to offer Congress in the future.

The NALC faced two major challenges in the last round of collective bargaining, Rolando said: The Postal Service’s financial losses, and the agreement reached by APWU in 2011, which complicated the task of resisting USPS’ concessionary demands.

“Thanks to the tireless efforts of the NALC’s officers, staff, legal team and expert witnesses,” the president said, “the Das award in January 2013 allowed us to meet most of our strategic goals: Producing a fair contract for letter carriers and for the Postal Service.”

The Das award created a path to career employment for part-time letter carriers as well as the City Carrier Assistant (CCA) position. “The CCA workforce remains a work in progress,” Rolando said. “Looking forward, we will focus on reducing the percentage of non-career carriers, raising CCA compensation by achieving general increases and COLAs, improving their health benefit coverage and winning pension credit for CCA service.”

“But we are not waiting for the next round of bargaining to make progress for CCAs,” he said, noting that the NALC has entered into multiple memorandum of understanding with the Postal Service that have resulted in thousands of part-time flexible and CCA conversions to full-time career status.

“The stakes in organizing CCAs are high,” he said, “because CCAs, who are more numerous and who have a clear path to career status, are pivotal to the future of the NALC.”

But even as the NALC fights for long-term job security, the president said, the union remains dedicated to preserving the safety, health and well being of our active members.

“That has been the focus of the joint Safety Committee,” Rolando said.

“The committee’s investigation had found the Postal Service’s anti-labor political forces in the United States, and the contract the NALC secured through interest arbitration.

“Although we did not emerge unscathed from the binding arbitration process, we achieved our most impor-
Rolando said. To advance that debate, Rolando appointed a Special Review Committee composed of branch, state and national leaders to report on these matters to the Philadelphia Convention. “Our goal,” he said, “is to maintain our powerful union so letter carriers can shape their destinies together.

“It’s up to us to save the Postal Service, just as we have always done,” he said. “We cannot count on USPS management or Board of Governors members. We have to stay strong and mobilize our allies in the legislature. Congress. We need a new USPS governance structure and new management.

“Imagine and building a dynamic postal service for the 21st century is the challenge for the next two years and for the next 25 years as well,” the president said.

“That’s the mission we must embrace in Philadelphia,” Rolando said. “Together, brothers and sisters, nobody can defeat us. Nobody can divide us, and nobody can get in our way.”

“Let’s get to work!” the president said to thunderous applause.

CONVENTION BUSINESS

Following his keynote address, Rolando called to the stage the chairman of the Convention Credentials Committee, Rod Holub of Manhattan, KS Branch 1018, to give the committee’s preliminary report.

Holub stated that by Sunday evening, a total of 5,366 delegates had reported to the Philadelphia Convention, representing 487 branches across 49 states. He also reported that the committee had investigated a protest by a member who claimed to be an elected convention delegate omitted from his branch’s delegate eligibility list. Holub reported that the committee’s investigation had found the protest to be without merit.

Rolando said that the committee’s figures meant that the convention had a quorum under Article 3, Section 3 of the NALC Constitution. The Credentials Committee will submit its final report later in the week.

President Rolando next invited Convention Rules Committee Chairman Dan Teague to the stage. Teague, a member of Central Florida Branch 1091, introduced the other members of the committee: Baton Rouge, LA Branch 129’s Troy Scott and Central Iowa Merged Branch 352’s Stephanie Stewart.

By acclamation, the convention voted to accept the convention rules en bloc.

President Rolando then introduced his appointee as election commissioner and chairman of the Board of Tellers, Joe DeKossi of Brooklyn, NY Branch 41, who listed the Board’s members:

Helen Amill, Branch 36, New York, NY; David Barbuzzi, Branch 25, Mass. NE Merged; Bill Bauder, Branch 442, Spokane, WA; James Beach, Branch 644, Muscatine, IA; Steve Bilzing, Branch 155, Belleville, IL; Kevin Boyer, Branch 763, Columbia, MO; Scott Carter, Branch 115, Wilkes-Barre, PA; Tony Davis, Branch 1358, Tulsa, OK; Tonya Detrick, Branch 443, Hagerstown, MD; Marcus Garcia, Branch 24, Los Angeles; CA; Jim Gleason, Branch 920, Bux-Mont, PA; Richard Griffin, Branch 2502, Las Vegas, NV; Mike Hanumzus, Branch 46, Western Massachusetts; Bob Henning, Branch 53, Northeast Florida; Ernest Knight, Branch 1071, South Florida; Doug Lape, Branch 43, Cincinnati, OH; Jim Lustumbo, Branch 134, Syracuse, NY; Wayne Martin, Branch 47, Denver, CO; Vincent Mase, Branch 19, New Haven, CT; Kathy McGaunty, Branch 2805, New Braunfels, TX; Mark Grady, Branch 38, New Jersey Merged; Timothy McKay, Branch 531, Charleston, WV; David Miller, Branch 458, Oklahoma City, OK; Marie Montano, Branch 504, Albuquerque, NM; John Page, Branch 927, Pocatello, ID; Margaret Parker, Branch 219, Aurora, IL; Francisco Peculia-Vega, Branch 1128, Fayetteville, NC; Darla Peterson, Branch 491, Sioux Falls, SD; Jeffrey Rainey, Branch 39, Kansas City, MO; Carlos Rodriguez, Branch 1456, Brownsville, TX; Paul Roznowski, Branch 3126, Royal Oak, MI; Penny Sprachmann, Branch 196, Elyria, OH; Paul Toms, Branch 39, Indianapolis, IN; Chris Vellicle, Branch 4, Nashville, TN; Andrew Weiner, Branch 562, Jamaica, NY and Timothy Whelan, Branch 157, Philadelphia, PA.

The delegates then voted to approve en bloc all proposed resolutions that had been recommended for approval by the Executive Council. They then debated some of the resolutions recommended for disapproval.

Two resolutions were approved after the sponsors agreed to make changes recommended by the Executive Council.

The delegates voted to uphold the Executive Council’s disapproval of a resolution that would have called for limiting the percentage of CCAs as a proportion of the total carrier workforce at the installation level rather than the district level. Following a division, delegates upheld the Executive Council’s disapproval of a resolution that would have called for NALC to negotiate for different pay levels in different parts of the country. Several other resolutions were withdrawn.

Rolando then turned the microphone over to President Emeritus William H. Young, who noted the NALC’s work to put the Postal Service on a solid footing to thrive and compete, including ending the mandate to pre-fund future retiree health care benefits and preserving six-day delivery.

President Emeritus William Young

The following resolutions were approved by the delegates at the National Convention. National agreement resolutions will now be part of the official position of the NALC in future contract negotiations.

Legislative Resolutions:

- NALC will seek to subject the conduct of Independent Medical Examiners to the same review and oversight as injured employees suspected and investigated for injury compensation fraud.

- NALC will seek to allow all non-career employees who become career employees to make deposits for service time with the Postal Service and/or another federal government agency.

National Agreement Resolutions:

- Revise Article 8.5 to include PFTs and non-career employees.

- Provide a Sunday premium to CCAs when they work.

- Restore former language in Article 9 concerning COLA pay scales.

- Return the wage differential of new and senior employees to levels prior to the Das award.

The delegates later viewed an inspirational video about Rademacher’s vital role in the NALC’s history, including negotiating with the Nixon administration for legislation that created the modern Postal Service and gave letter carriers collective-bargaining rights.

Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-MA) then greeted the delegates in a video message. Warren noted that she is a co-sponsor of the Postal Service Protection Act (S. 316), legislation supported by NALC that would take action to put the Postal Service on a footing to thrive and compete, including ending the mandate to pre-fund future retiree health care benefits and preserving six-day delivery. Warren also called for expanding the Postal Service’s role in the economy by allowing access to financial transaction services for rural, low-income and other people who have been shut out of the banking system.

“We need a strong Postal Service to strengthen and grow our economy,” she said. “The Postal Service is a critical part of our community, and hard-working letter carriers are the key to its success.”

The delegates returned the favor of Warren’s video by recording a letter carrier cheer to be delivered to her.

Executive Vice President Timothy C. O’Malley then presented awards to carriers who, since the last convention, have generated leads of more than $1 million through the Customer Connect program.

Next, Rolando introduced Richard Nash, eBay’s head of U.S., Canada and Latin America government affairs; eBay is one of the Postal Service’s largest parcel shipping customers. A quarter of all parcels handled by USPS, Nash said, are generated by eBay, bringing in $2.2 billion in postage paid.

Nash said the Postal Service is essential to his company’s success, and eBay is a committed partner in NALC’s efforts to protect the Postal Service. “For every individual or small business with something to sell on eBay, someone needs to pick up the package,” he said, “and someone needs to deliver it to the home or business of the buyer. And that someone is you.

“It goes without saying that eBay especially loves the six-day delivery schedule,” Nash said.

Secretary-Treasurer Jane Broendel then presented her secretary-treasurer’s report and financial report to the delegates, noting the opportunities and challenges that the influx of CCAs has brought to the union. Membership levels, she said, have halted their rapid decline of the last decade—the number of active members remains steady at about 180,000, and retired members at about 89,000. Taking full advantage of the Postal Service’s hiring trend will require a focus on organizing, since NALC membership among CCAs lags behind career carriers.

Broendel’s report was poignant because it was her last—she will retire at the end of her term in December. She has served as national secretary-treasurer since 2002, after becoming the NALC’s first female national officer when she was sworn in as assistant secretary-treasurer in 1998.

“I say thank you, and goodbye, to all of you for all the wonderful years you have allowed me to serve as your national secretary-treasurer,” Broendel said. “It’s certainly been an honor and a pleasure.” The delegates responded with extended standing applause. Rolando then led delegates in a letter carrier cheer for Broendel.

Rolando next introduced the chairman of the Committee on the President’s Biennial Report, Ken Christy of Aurora, IL Branch 295. Christy introduced committee members Kimberly Armhold of Pasadena, TX Branch 386 and Joe Henschen of West Coast Florida Branch 477. A motion to accept the biennial report was approved.

Delegates watched a video, “Remembering Vince,” in which many NALC activists and Sombruto family members shared their memories hero of the 1970 postal strike, Vincent Sombruto, who passed away last year. The video was an expanded version of the one shown at a celebration of the former president’s life that followed the memorial service held in New York in January.

The delegates then observed a moment of silence as Rolando read the names of nine carriers killed in the line of duty since the 2012 convention. Their names will be added to the memorial at NALC Headquarters honoring carriers lost on the job: Atzelia Borges, San Juan, PR Branch 869; John A. Watzlawick, Independence, MO Branch 30; Stephen K. Bishop, Phoenix, AZ Branch 576; Robert R. Rochester, Wilmington, DE Branch 191; Kenneth C. Carrano, Brick Town, NJ Branch 5420; Juan C. Riestra, West Palm Beach, FL Branch 1690; Alan R. Nobile, Long Island Merged, NY Branch 6000; Leo M. Brandt, Minneapolis, MN Branch 9 and Leo R. Sucharski, Buffalo-Western New York Branch 3.

Rolando recessed the convention at 3:20 p.m.
